CONTINUATION SHEET

Address: 1 Belden Avenue, Norwalk – Norwalk Public Library

Additional Information: Norwalk was at the forefront of creating libraries for its City. In the late 19th century, the library movement was part of the new educational philosophy that stressed assisting adults with furthering their education. A committee consisting of Congressman Hill, Dr. James Gregory and Miss Dotha Stone Pinneo was formed to establish a library on Wall Street. At the turn of the century, the City received funding from Andrew Carnegie which resulted in the construction of two more libraries, one on Belden Avenue. Miss Stone-Pinneo went on to become the first librarian for this library and served in that capacity for twenty-eight years. Ahead of her time, Miss Stone-Pinneo opened the library shelves to the public when most libraries would not allow this practice for fear of theft. Originally constructed in the Tudor Revival style and clad with red brick, the Belden building is extant and continues to function as a library, albeit with modern updates and additions.

Address: 2 Belden Avenue, Norwalk – Post Office

Additional Information: During the Great Depression, Norwalk fared better than many cities and towns throughout the nation due to its industry. The owners of local businesses and small manufacturers lived in the community and had a sense of responsibility and loyalty to their employees. Construction continued at a slow pace with a few significant projects. One construction project during this time period was the Post Office on Belden Avenue. Built of red brick in the Classical Revival style, this structure contains a WPA oil-on-canvas mural entitled “Building Norwalk” by the artist Arnold Branch in 1938.

Address: 43 Harbor Avenue, Norwalk – Carver Apartments

Additional Information: In 1943, a new Mayor, Robert B. Oliver, was elected. Many people had come to Norwalk during the war to work in the factories and housing was an issue. However, never before Oliver's administration had anyone looked at the plight of the Black community in Norwalk. Conditions were so deplorable that several families living in tenements were sharing an outdoor privy. After a fire destroyed a dilapidated four-family house near the railroad tracks, leaders from the black community and their advocates petitioned for condemnation of substandard structures in the area. They were also able to raise funds for the creation of the Carver Apartments, low income housing.

Address: 2 Knight Street, Norwalk – Landmark Square

Additional Information: According to the National and State Register nomination “Wall Street Historic District,” this structure was built circa 1840 and was probably one of the only buildings to survive the 1855 and 1858 fires which devastated this area of Norwalk. The “Norwalk Historic Resources Inventory” from 1976 dates this building to 1860 and was built by Evert Quintard (1798-1891) for E. Quintard & Sons furniture showrooms and undertaking business. The 1891 Sanborn map shows a music business at the Wall Street side of the footprint while an undertaking business occupies the rear. The 1901 Sanborn map describe a crockery on the first floor of the building, an undertaking business on the second floor and storage on the third. By the 1906 map the Norwalk Hour occupies the building and this continues through the 1958 map with an expansion into 4 Knight Street by 1922. The Hour was Norwalk’s third newspaper started in 1871 by Brainard W. Maples. Although the paper began in Westport it soon moved to Norwalk and in 1895 put the Norwalk Gazette out of business.

Address: 33 Merwin Street, Norwalk

Additional Information: This structure is the Bethel AME church, built in 1959 in the Classical Revival style (liber 376, page 433). Although the church was built in 1959 this organization has a long history in Norwalk. In 1874, Augusta Ann Price, one of the Churches founders, invited a group of African Americans to worship in her home and they formed the “Union Mission Society” as an independent church. The Rev. William Lamar assumed the pastorate in 1919 and sought to have the Society join a denominational body. In 1922 he proposed affiliation with the African Methodist Episcopal Church. The Norwalk group petitioned the New England Annual Conference in 1923 and they were accepted. At this time the church was on Knight Street.

In 1949 Reverend J.C. Drake initiated a fund drive for the purchase of a site and construction of a new church building with a contribution of $1,500. In December of that same year, Reverend Felix W. Bagby was appointed pastor of the Norwalk Bethel AME and he continued Rev. Drake’s efforts toward a new church. Property with a house was purchased for the structure on February 20, 1953 on the corner of Merwin and Academy Streets.

Community members and businesses donated monies toward the construction of the new church. Architect Carina Milligan, AIA of New Canaan donated her design services to the Church as well as a steeple in memory of Rev. Bagby. Finally on September 7, 1958 the ground breaking ceremony was held and on May 10th of the following year, the cornerstone was laid. On August 30, 1959 the first service was held in the new church and it was dedicated a month later on September 13th by the Rt. Reverend George W. Barber, Bishop of the First Episcopal District of the AME Church.

Additional Information: This bank was built for the Norwalk Savings Society in 1922, originally organized in 1849. The Society built the new structure to replace a previous one on the north side of Wall Street at the intersection with Isaac Street. The architect and builder was Fred T. Ley & Co. They had an office on Madison Avenue at 57th Street and were better known as builders and real estate developers than designers. The firm did participate in the building of the Chrysler Building. Hardware for the Norwalk Savings Society Building was provided by the Norwalk Lock Company. The structure is listed on the Wall Street National Register Historic District and retains its original use as a bank today.

Address: 295 West Avenue, Norwalk – Lockwood Mathews Mansion

Additional Information: In 1863, LeGrand Lockwood, a New York financier, and a director of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and of several railroad companies, purchased 30 acres to build his new country estate at what is now 295 West Avenue. The architect commissioned for the grand residence built in the French Renaissance Chateau style was Detlef Lienau, a Danish-born, French-trained architect. Artists and artisans from Europe and stone masons and wood workers from Italy came to work on the mansion and grounds. The estate was the family's summer residence and it was a good source of employment for area residents, employing 60 full-time gardeners just for the grounds. The Panic of 1869 forced Lockwood to mortgage his estate. In 1876 the estate was acquired by Charles Mathers, a New York City importer and the Mathews family occupied the estate until 1938.
